Concern Elevates Over Economy

With his poll favor waning, Obama says U.S. shouldn't panic

Washington

With few options at hand and his poll numbers sagging, President Obama expressed concern Tuesday about the sudden slowdown in the economy but said he is not worried about a second recession and the nation should "not panic."

The president spoke about the new economic trouble in detail for the first time since a report late last week showed job growth had slowed sharply in May. He tried to reassure Americans worried about high unemployment and expensive gas that the nation is on a slow, if not steady, path to recovery.

"I am concerned about the fact that the recovery that we're on is not producing jobs as quickly as I want it to happen," Obama said at an appearance with visiting German Chancellor Angela Merkel. "We don't yet know whether this is a one-month episode or a longer trend."

CHARLES DHARAPAK/AP

President Obama tries to ease worry over the economy Tuesday at the White House.

Federal Reserve chief Ben Bernanke, speaking in Atlanta on Tuesday, acknowledged the economy has lost momentum but said nothing to suggest the Fed was about to take any bold new action.

And with lawmakers fighting over the nation's budget deficit and long-term debt, there is no political appetite for a second major federal stimulus bill.

At the same time, the president is confronted with a slate of figures presenting challenges to both the economic recovery and his own reelection prospects. Just as the field of Republican challengers begins to take shape, a Washington Post-ABC News survey found that public disapproval of Obama's handling of the economy has reached a record high, 59 percent.

Seventeen months before the election, unemployment is 9.1 percent. When Obama took office, it was 7.8 percent. Most economists

Pawlenty's Plan

lengers, accused Obama on Tuesday of being satisfied with a second-rate economy "produced by his third-rate policies." Pawlenty proposed cutting taxes on business by more than half and simplifying the tax code to just three tiers, with a top marginal rate for individuals of 25 percent; it's now 35 percent. (AP) think the rate will be above 8 percent at election time next year. No president since World War II has been re-elected with unemployment higher than 7.2 percent.

The day brought the latest in a stream of downbeat economic news: A government report said there were 4.6 unemployed people, on average, for each available job in April. In a healthy economy, the ratio is 2-to-1. CHRISTOPHER S. RUGABER AND MARTIN CRUTSINGER (AP)

Delayed Reaction: The government's threat to levy huge fines against airlines that hold passengers on the ground for hours has worked: Long tarmac delays are down dramatically since the rule went into effect a year ago. But delays haven't disappeared. There have been 20 of three hours or more in the past year, yet no airlines have been fined, and analysts wonder whether the lack of enforcement will result in a return to long stays on the runway. Fire 2nd Largest in Ariz. History

Springerville, Ariz.

Bulldozers scraped away brush and trees on Tuesday to create a barrier between two eastern Arizona mountain towns and a mammoth wildfire. Crews removed brush from around homes and firefighters were sent to protect other buildings from the flames.

All the while, the 7,000 residents of Eagar and Springerville prepared to leave if the second-largest wildfire in state history edges closer. "If given the word, then I'm gonna go," Eagar resident Gerald McCardle said. "We're already packed. We packed last night, and we're out of here."

Officials say the blaze has already burned 486 square miles and is about 10 miles outside the towns. Winds have been driving the flames 5 to 8 miles a day since the fire began a week ago, possibly from an unattended campfire.

Smoke plumes from the large wildfire in Arizona rise on Monday over Luna, N.M.

The fire has already driven thousands from their homes and cabins in the resort towns of the nearby Apache-Sitgreaves National Forest. No serious injuries have been reported, but the fire has destroyed five buildings so far. It has cast smoke as far east as Iowa and forced some planes to divert from Albuquerque, N.M., some 200 miles away. Authorities warned Springerville and Eagar residents that they may have to join about 2,700 others who have fled.

The state's largest blaze came in 2002 when flames blackened more than 732 square miles and destroyed 491 homes. (AP)

Accident Exposes Risks of 'Bounce Houses'

Gusts send 3 large inflatable toys in the air in N.Y., hurting 13

Oceanside, N.Y.

They look like harmless fun — fluffy, inflated castles, ships and slides filled with children jumping around carelessly, their parents letting their guard down a bit during playtime.

But an accident that sent three of the huge toys aloft on a breezy afternoon on New York's Long Island, left a woman seriously injured and hurt 12 other people is drawing attention to the little-known hazards of the inflatable playthings sometimes called "bounce houses" and the inconsistent regulations covering them.

At least 10 inflatables around the country have been toppled by winds or collapsed under too much weight in the past two months, injuring more than 40 people, according to RideAccidents.com, a website that tracks amusement ride accidents.

It's not the toys themselves that are the problem, it's the way they are set up and supervised, said Jim Barber, a spokesman for the National Association of Amusement Ride Safety Officials, based in Brandon, Fla.

"I wish this was a rarity, but it's not. It happens all the time." (AP)

Smoke from a hammering of airstrikes billows on Tuesday in Tripoli, Libya, during the heaviest wave of coalition bombing runs yet since NATO took over the air campaign.

Fiery Airstrikes, Fierce Defiance

NATO hits intensify in Libya, but Gadhafi vows to never give up

Tripoli, Libya

Libyan leader Moammar Gadhafi stood defiant Tuesday in the face of the heaviest and most punishing NATO airstrikes yet, at least 40 thunderous daylight attacks that sent plumes of smoke billowing above the dictator's Tripoli compound.

In the afternoon and as the strikes continued, Libyan state television broadcast an address from Gadhafi, who denounced NATO and the rebels.

"We will not kneel!" he shouted,

"We will not surrender. We only have one choice — to the end! Death, victory, it does not matter."

— MOAMMAR GADHAFI, LIBYA'S LEADER, IN A SPEECH BROADCAST TUESDAY BY STATE TELEVISION.

vowing never to surrender.

It couldn't be confirmed whether the some 10-minute speech was a live phone call or an audio recording.

Alliance officials have warned for days they were increasing the scope and intensity of their air campaign to oust Gadhafi after his more-than 40 years in power.

NATO is backing the rebel insurgency, which has seized swaths of eastern Libya and pockets in the regime's stronghold in the west since it began in February, inspired by uprisings elsewhere in the Arab world.

Western reporters and a senior Libyan official said the pounding airstrikes Tuesday outstripped the number of bombing runs on any day since NATO took over the air campaign from the U.S.

Libyan government spokesman Moussa Ibrahim told reporters that he believed about 30 people were killed in 60 NATO strikes on Tripoli. Reporters, who face tight restrictions in the Libyan capital, saw only one dead man during a visit to Gadhafi's Bab al-Aziziya compound and counted about 40 explosions. Previous government tolls have proved to be exaggerated.

Meanwhile, Gadhafi's inner circle continues to be shaken by defections. A Libyan rebel diplomat in Geneva said Tuesday that the labor minister, Al-Amin Manfour, has joined the rebels. (AP)

Officials: Yemeni Attack Left Saleh Seriously Hurt

San'a, Yemen

President Ali Abdullah Saleh was burned over 40 percent of his body and suffered bleeding in his brain from last weekend's attack on his palace, U.S. officials said Tuesday, indicating his wounds were worse than initially reported. The revelation casts doubts on a quick return to Yemen for Saleh and spells a deepening power vacuum. Three U.S. officials said Saleh, who is being treated in Saudi Arabia, is also bleeding in his skull. Those officials said U.S. officials think the injuries were caused by a bomb planted inside his compound, not a rocket attack from outside the compound walls. That conflicts with initial reports of the attack, which killed 11 bodyguards and wounded more than 150 people, including five senior officials.

Saleh underwent surgery on Monday to remove shards of wood. A top official has said he will return home within days. (AP)

Reports: Rebellious Soldiers Led Attack in Syria

Beirut

A deadly mutiny of Syrian soldiers and loss of control over the tense northern town of Jisr al-Shughour appeared to show extraordinary cracks in an autocratic regime that has long prided itself on its iron control.

Details about the events in Jisr al-Shughour remained murky on Tuesday. The government said 120 forces were dead, without explaining the enormous loss of life.

But reports Tuesday from residents and activists — and the television appearance of a soldier who says he switched sides — were the clearest sign yet that President

Bashar Assad's grip is eroding.

A resident said a number of soldiers defected, angered by the thuggish behavior of pro-government gunmen known as "Shabiha," a fearsome name that some believe has roots in the Arabic word for "ghost."

In many ways, Syrians say, the Shabiha are more terrifying than the army and security forces, whose tactics include firing on protesters.

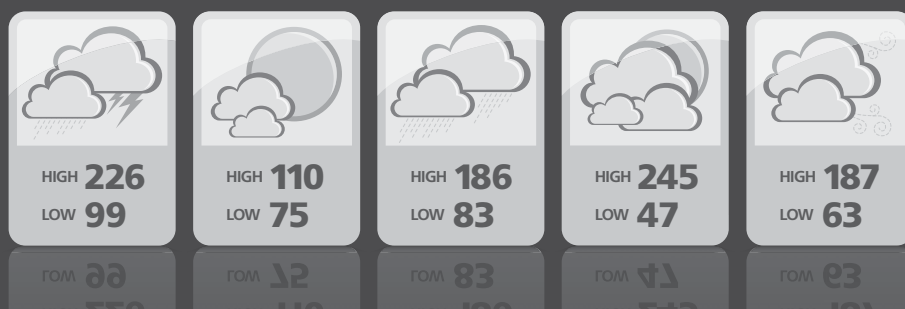

A Jisr al-Shughour resident said people were fleeing for the Turkish border about 12 miles away, fearing retaliation from the regime, which vowed Monday to respond "decisively" to the violence there.

The nationwide crackdown on the revolt against Assad has left more than 1,300 Syrians dead, activists say. (AP)

Germany's E. Coli Hunt Slammed

Experts: Likelihood of finding outbreak's source is decreasing

London

Health experts and German lawmakers criticized Germany on Tuesday for a bungled investigation into the world's deadliest E. coli outbreak, saying the infections should have been spotted much sooner.

German officials are still looking for the cause of the outbreak that began May 2. So far, the super-toxic strain of E. coli has killed 24 people, infected more than 2,400 and left hundreds hospitalized with a serious complication that can lead to kidney failure. New cases are still being reported every day — 94 more were reported in Germany Tuesday.

German officials first accused Spanish cucumbers of being the culprit last week. On Sunday, they blamed German sprouts, only to backtrack a day later.

A worker on Tuesday dumps questionable tomatoes in Werder, Germany.

"If we don't know the likely culprit in a week's time, we may never know the cause," Dr. Guenael Rodier, the director of communicable diseases at the World Health Organization, said Tuesday.

Other experts were far more critical of the investigation.

"If you gave us 200 cases and five days, we should be able to solve this outbreak," said Michael Osterholm, director of the Center for Infectious Disease Research and Policy at the University of Minnesota.

On Tuesday, the EU health chief warned Germany against issuing any more premature — and inaccurate — conclusions about the source of contaminated food. (AP)

Security Makeover

Eye scanners and futuristic security tunnels may be in airports soon as the airline industry seeks to ease security hassles. The International Air Transport Association unveiled a mock-up Tuesday in Singapore of its "Checkpoint of the Future," with tunnels that scan shoes and luggage. The Transportation Security Administration may start a pilot program this year that allows travelers with clean records to undergo fewer checks, U.S. officials say. (AP)

Till Sext Do Us Part

Many Americans say racy interactions amount to infidelity

Behavior

Jon Austin's wife, Amy, had a blunt assessment for him as the Minneapolis couple watched Rep. Anthony Weiner's stunning confessions on television this week.

"You'd be dead," she told him.

Regardless of his career's future, it's Weiner's predicament at home that seems to be launching countless discussions among couples like the Austins. And this time, it's not a question of actual physical cheating — a la Eliot Spitzer and his prostitution scandal — but the murkier backdrop of Internet relationships: sexting, tweeting lewd photos, emailing.

If it's virtual, does it constitute infidelity? Many Americans seem to think it does.

"Would you text it, post it, send it with your spouse looking over your shoulder?" asks Austin, 52, who takes no issue with his wife's appraisal. "If yes, then it's not infidelity. If no, you're cheating."

In online postings and follow-up phone calls with The Associated Press, dozens of people echoed the same thought: Cheating need not be physical.

A specialist in Internet addiction says that many people turn to online relationships to escape the pressures of their daily lives, reveling in the anonymity — particularly if, like a congressman, they are well known.

But some, says Kimberly Young, director of the Center for Internet Addiction Recovery, experience a more dangerous sense of detachment, somehow convincing themselves once the laptop is closed: "I didn't really do that. That wasn't me." And they don't see their actions as infidelity.

"I've seen married people go to great lengths to cover things up,

Rep. Anthony Weiner, who is married, admitted Monday that he tweeted a lewd photograph amid other online relationships.

"For men, the sexual act is much more disturbing than anything else. For women, what constitutes a betrayal is any emotional or sexual interaction."

— GAIL SALTZ, A PSYCHOLOGIST IN NEW YORK CITY WHO COUNSELS COUPLES.

Backstory

In the Spotlight

The woman at the center of the Rep. Anthony Weiner scandal is a 21-year-old college student in Seattle. According to the New York Post and other news outlets, Gennette Cordova received a lewd picture from Weiner but never met him in person. She said she suspects the picture was not intended for her, but for someone else — rumors point to porn star Ginger Lee. In an odd coincidence, Cordova was voted in high school to be the student most likely to be involved in a tabloid scandal. (EXPRESS) hiding phone bills and the like," says Young, a practicing psychologist. "But they don't think it's cheating. They say, 'I love my wife.'"

There are few statistics on adults and online relationships, partly because most research has focused on teenagers.

There are, though, recent numbers on the prevalence of sexting among adults. In a May 2010 survey from the Pew Internet and American Life Project, 15 percent of adults said they had received "a sexually suggestive nude or nearly nude photo or video" on their cell phone, and 6 percent said they had sent such a text. In the 18-to-29 demographic, the numbers rose to 31 percent and 13 percent.

Is the Weiner scandal — in which the married congressman confessed, after days of denying it, to tweeting a lewd crotch photo of himself to a woman in Seattle — a Mars versus Venus moment? Do men see it differently than women?

Psychologist Gail Saltz thinks so. Of course, she notes, men are more forgiving when it comes to judging other men, but not so with their own partners. "A man would be extremely disturbed if his wife did any of this," Saltz said, referring to the type of activity Weiner says he engaged in.

Psychologist Elana Katz says there is a potentially positive note to all of this: If the online activity doesn't go beyond the point of no return, a couple can learn from the ordeal, which in some cases is the first sign of trouble.

"Relationships can and do recover from this behavior, and in some instances the discovery is the first opportunity to ask the hard questions waiting to be addressed," says Katz. JOCELYN NOVECK (AP)

Attacked on Both Sides

Since Rep. Anthony Weiner revealed on Monday his risqué behavior online, Weiner has found himself under fire from both sides of the aisle. (AP)

House Minority Leader Nancy Pelosi and other members of the Democratic leadership voiced their disappointment in Weiner and urged the House ethics committee to launch an investigation to determine whether the New York Democrat broke House rules. Their calls came shortly after the married Weiner's public apology for "inappropriate" online exchanges with six women.

Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid delivered a rebuff to Weiner, a clear sign of the frustrations fellow Democrats have with a scandal they want to see over as soon as possible. "I know Congressman Weiner," Reid told reporters. "I wish there was some way I could defend him, but I can't."

House Majority Leader Eric Cantor and Reince Priebus, the Republican Party chairman, said Tuesday that Rep. Anthony Weiner should resign after admitting to sexually charged online relationships and lying about his misdeeds.

The National Republican Congressional Committee also seized on the Weiner scandal as a 2012 campaign issue, calling on more than a dozen House Democrats to return campaign contributions from Weiner. One of them, Rep. Betty Sutton, D-Ohio, said she was donating a $1,000 campaign contribution from Weiner to a local charity.

Web SmarTrip Uploads to Come

Riders will soon be able to use personal computers to add fare

Washington

Metro officials said riders will soon be able to upload money to their SmarTrip cards from their own computers.

The process will allow Metro riders to use their personal computers to upload money onto their SmarTrip card.

Once the money is uploaded with a credit card or debt card, a rider will be able to touch the SmarTrip card to a fare vending machine or at a fare gate to see the added money.

Metro said it is developing the system now and expects to run a pilot program of the new uploading system with 5,000 SmarTrip riders later this month or in July.

The software system, called Cubic, for SmarTrip cards has had some troubles with patrons' not being able to upload fares on their weekly bus passes.

SmarTrip cards will eventually be phased out in the coming years, Metro said, and it is working to find a fare card system that will replace it. DANA HEDGPETH (THE WASHINGTON POST)

D.C. Pols Back to the Bad Days?

With 5 city council members under fire, old reputation returns

Washington

A fringe mayoral candidate tells a D.C. Council hearing that "the mayor is a crook." The city's attorney general accuses council member Harry Thomas Jr. of spending more than $300,000 of public money on a luxury vehicle and personal travel. The new council chairman, Kwame Brown, is embarrassed into giving up the fancy SUV that the city ordered.

The new mayor, Vincent Gray, gets rid of his chief of staff after reports that several children of top officials were given city jobs.

What does it mean that at least five members of the council and the mayor himself are trying to fend off accusations of wrongdoing?

Some say former mayor Adrian Fenty's failed campaign slogan about Gray proposing to take the city back to its bad old days has been proved correct.

But the acts that led to this year's scandals took place before Gray came into office, leading other observers to suggest that the rash of scandals reflects instead a growing propensity among city politicians to live beyond their means in recent years.

Brown

Gray

Not since the 1980s has the District government offered its critics such a rich vein of material to support the notion that the city government is run by people with an ethical blind spot. The allegations about council members' abusing public dollars and about Gray's campaign leaders giving improper payoffs and a city job to a fellow candidate have resurrected doubts about the D.C. government.

"This is not back to the '80s, in that even then there were not allegations of council members taking money," said former council member William Lightfoot, a lawyer who held a top post in Fenty's failed re-election bid.

"Our problems in the past were different: Marion Barry was drugs; Tony Williams was the dork; Adrian was arrogant. What we're seeing now is a reflection of a bigger problem: The elected officials think they're entitled to a lifestyle and privileges that ordinary people do not have."

Southwest: Growth to Help BWI

Linthicum, Md.

International expansion by Southwest Airlines into the Caribbean, Central America and, later, European markets will likely be a boon for BWI, according to the discount carrier's chief executive officer.

Baltimore/Washington International Thurgood Marshall Airport has struggled to attract and retain foreign flights, and such an expansion by Southwest could reshape the airport's limited international presence.

BWI has "been a candidate in our minds for as long as we've been thinking about expanding internationally," said Gary Kelly, Southwest's chairman, president and CEO.

Kelly, speaking at a BWI Business Partnership meeting last week, called the international market a "great opportunity" for Southwest, and said foreign destinations could be reached with Southwest jets, or Company officials say Southwest's international expansion could raise BWI's profile.

through a partner carrier.

The airline gained a toehold overseas with the acquisition of low-cost competitor AirTran Airways, which flies to the Caribbean and Mexico. Kelly said Southwest is eyeing those markets for further expansion, and other long-haul flights to Alaska, Hawaii and Canada.

"Eventually, I think we'll want to consider flights from the East Coast to Europe," he said. "BWI would be a very logical [location] to consider that kind of expansion." (AP)

Delegate Norton Proposes July Dancing Holiday

Washington

The recent controversy over dancing at the Jefferson Memorial has inspired a congresswoman: Eleanor Holmes Norton wants to turn booty shaking on the Mall into a national holiday.

Norton plans to amend a Mall revitalization bill to declare July 30th National Dance Day on the Mall and around the country. She plans to get "So You Think You Can Dance" judge Nigel Lythgoe and others involved in the action, which will include a flash mob and troupes of local dancers.

"When people go as far as Flash Mob dancing without a permit on the Mall, we should see such a response from the public as a wake-up call to make the Mall more with it," Norton said.

Teen star Bryce Harper proves he still has plenty to learn even as racks up huge stats in the minors

The Nationals

Bryce Harper took an outside strike and shot a disapproving glance at the umpire. It shouldn't have been a surprise to the young phenom. The ump had been calling them wide all game. Showing displeasure — with a man on base in the seventh

The number of home runs that Bryce Harper has hit with Hagerstown. He also has a .342 batting average.

..... Another lesson learned by a teenager — albeit one who was on the cover of Sports Illustrated when he was 16 and drafted No. 1 overall last year — navigating the backwaters of minor league baseball.

After a slow start with the Class A Hagerstown Suns, Harper went on an 18-game hitting streak, and is now among the South Atlantic League leaders in batting average and homers. He attributed the turnaround to new contact lenses, saying he was “blind as a bat” until he got them on April 18.

Nationals fans are, of course, paying attention. Some are clamoring for Harper's promotion to the big club. If not now, then soon. Washington is in last place in the NL East and one of the worst-hitting teams in the majors, so why take the long, slow road with the kid?

The answer, for those who see Harper every day, is easy. There are dozens of things — from obvious to subtle and tangible to intangible — that go into making a major league baseball player. Maturity. Baserunning. Learning to work the count. Dealing with the grind. Attitude.

Harper has a head start on most of them, but he's mastered maybe three. He has a major league arm in

Pucker Up

On Monday night, Bryce Harper showed his immature side, puckering a kiss toward the pitcher while rounding the bases after hitting a home run against Greensboro. That's the type of behavior that will get him beamed in the majors — perhaps in the minors, too. The first pitch in his next at-bat was a brushback, high and inside. (AP)

..... the outfield and a powerful swing, and is very competitive. Everything else is a work in progress for an 18-year-old who, in another world, would right now be rehashing tales from his senior prom.

“One of the biggest sins you can make is putting guys into position where they're going to fail early,” said Doug Harris, the Nationals' director of player development. “We want to make sure we've built a good foundation, not only on the field but in the clubhouse.”

Harper validated Harris' point last Thursday. While the headline will forever record that Harper hit his first walkoff homer with the Suns, the details reveal he was picked off in the first inning and then got caught in a rundown in the fifth trying to advance on a ball in the dirt. The miscues are part of a recurring theme — he's been embarrassed more than once trying to snag an extra 90 feet this season.

“He's a very aggressive player, which is great,” said Hagerstown manager Brian Daubach. “We talk about the right situations to be aggressive, just really trying to think before the play happens.” (AP)

ANOTHER HOTSHOT AT THE HOT CORNER

The Nationals proudly announced on Monday that they had selected Anthony Rendon, a college third baseman, boasting that he is an accomplished hitter who can win Gold Gloves. They say it shouldn't be long before he's in the majors, just like Ryan Zimmerman six years ago. They really didn't have much choice — there were six players considered head and shoulders above the rest, and the junior from Rice was the last one standing. (AP)

Injuries Force Woods to Pull Out of U.S. Open

Superstar will miss tournament for the first time since 1994

Golf

Tiger Woods pulled out of the U.S. Open on Tuesday because of lingering issues with his left leg, leaving him uncertain how soon he can resume his pursuit of Jack Nicklaus' record for major titles.

It will be the first time Woods has missed the U.S. Open since 1994, when he had just graduated from high school.

"I am extremely disappointed that I won't be playing in the U.S. Open, but it's time for me to listen to my doctors and focus on the future," Woods said on his website. "I was hopeful that I could play, but if I did, I risk further damage to my left leg. My knee and Achilles tendon are not fully healed."

Tiger Woods said his left knee and Achilles' tendon are not fully healed.

Woods said he hoped to be ready for the AT&T National, which starts June 30, and the next two majors. Then again, he said two weeks ago he would do everything possible to be ready for the U.S. Open, which is far more significant.

The U.S. Open starts June 16 at Congressional, where Woods won the AT&T National two years ago and tied for 19th when the U.S. Open was last played there, in 1997. (AP)

Criticism Fuels Freeman

Former Hoyas guard trims down in hopes of getting drafted

Pro Basketball

When Austin Freeman arrived at Verizon Center for his pre-NBA draft workout with the Wizards last week, he entered the same building he called home for four years as a guard with the Georgetown Hoyas. But there was something different about Freeman.

In response to critics who claim that the All-Big East First Teamer does not possess the ideal build and athleticism for a shooting guard in the NBA, Freeman shed 20 pounds over the past 2½ months in an attempt to increase his chances of being drafted on June 23.

"My body is my tool, and I have to take care of it," the much leaner Freeman said Thursday.

Last season with the Hoyas, Freeman, who was then listed as 235 pounds, averaged 17.6 points per game. But the knock on him has been that he's not quick enough to match up against NBA guards. Now, after changing his diet and working out twice a day with two trainers, Freeman feels he has more bounce and stamina.

Freeman is projected to go late in the second round of the draft at best. He is the type of player who will have to find a niche; most likely, he will need to show that he can be a knockdown outside shooter.

"You know, to show that I can score the ball, I can shoot, and I'll be able to defend on the defensive end," said Freeman, who starred at DeMatha Catholic High School in Hyattsville, Md.

Freeman actually started changing his diet more than a year ago, when he was diagnosed with Type 1 diabetes during his junior season at Georgetown. He said he has the disease under control and that it's not affecting his play.

"They say I can't do this, but I just have to come out and show them that I can," Freeman said.

NBC Holds on to the Olympics

Television

NBC on Tuesday retained its hold on U.S. Olympic television rights Tuesday in a four-Olympics deal through 2020 worth about $4.4 billion, defeating rival bids from ESPN and Fox.

NBC, now controlled by Comcast, won the bid less than a month after the resignation of longtime sports and Olympics chief Dick Ebersol in a dispute with the new owners. The victory extends NBC's reign as the Olympic network in the United States, a period stretching back 20 years.

NBC has broadcast every Summer Olympics since 1988 and every Winter Games since 2002.

The network now will have exclusive rights to the 2014 Winter Games in Sochi, Russia; the 2016 Summer Olympics in Rio de Janeiro; and the 2018 Winter Games and 2020 Summer Olympics, whose sites have not been chosen. (AP)

'Dreamgirls' Diary

Speaker Of the Blouse

Ra! Ra! Germany!

Last night, the first lady surely looked radiant at the state dinner honoring German Chancellor Angela Merkel, above. Trying to guess who Michelle Obama would wear made me wonder: What if she chose a German designer? "Wait," you say, "there are German designers?"

Germany doesn't have a couture heritage, yet big names hail from the nation. Karl Lagerfeld, the chief designer for Chanel, and Jil Sander, founder of her namesake house, were born in Germany during the Third Reich. Labels such as Etienne Aigner and Escada are based in Munich; for years, their products carried "Made in West Germany" on their labels. Since 2007, Berlin even has its own Fashion Week, just like London, Paris and Milan.

By now, photos of Obama's gown are out, and it's likely she wore American. (This column went to print before the White House announced the designer.) But President Obama could have worn a piece by German-born American designer Robert Geller, who won the CFDA's Swarovski Award for Menswear on Monday. It would have been a sweet nod to Deutschland and its fashionable (American) ties.

The Chef of Darkness

On YouTube, a black metal-loving vegan is putting a satanic spin on cooking shows

Online

The Vegan Black Metal Chef is sacrificing something on his granite pentagram. It is a potato.

The potato is chopped into ragged pieces with a horrible metal instrument of death, then boiled and then beaten with a large silver mace shaped like a human skull. Flecks of potato flesh spray onto the Vegan Black Metal Chef's carefully applied makeup, which, like the Vegan Black Metal Chef, is also vegan. The cooking utensils on the counter — swords, daggers, blades of chaos — shudder menacingly with pulsing vibrations of the ominous background music, which, like the Vegan Black Metal Chef, is also black metal.

Then the Vegan Black Metal Chef mixes the potatoes with a dollop of dairy-free buttery spread and a splash of almond milk and plates them attractively on a spiked metal tray with some vegetarian baked beans and a serving of corn.

A few weeks ago, a video appeared online. It was called "Vegan Black Metal Chef Episode 1: Pad Thai." It featured a man in chain mail, arm bracers and rubber shoulder armor whipping up a delightful noodle dish in his kitchen. "Cut the tofu in half, like so," he instructed in guttural snarl. "You are missing one ingredient. That is, of course, the heat ... of ... SATAN."

It has more than a million views.

It is your cooking future.

"People have said, 'You should

When Brian Manowitz isn't filming himself cooking, he's playing in black metal bands and doing freelance sound engineering.

Extreme Eats

On the Web show "Epic Meal Time," a "Dude Where's My Spatula?" take on cooking, host Harley Morenstein, above center, blends wisecracks with bacon. One dish, for example, is called the Cheesy Grilled Cheese Tower. "I like to say it's a celebration-of-food show," he says. "Let's do it how you really want it. Not how society pretends it wants to eat, but how that little fatty inside of you wants to eat." M.H.

"People have said, 'You should put this on the Food Network.' I don't know if the Food Network would really be interested."

— BRIAN MANOWITZ, THE HOST OF "VEGAN BLACK METAL CHEF."

put this on the Food Network," says Brian Manowitz. (Vegan Black Metal Chefs are usually not born as such, and sometimes they are born as nice Jewish boys in Tampa, Fla., named Brian Manowitz.) "I don't know if the Food Network would really be interested."

YouTube is.

YouTube has become the repository for extreme cooking shows — cook-or-die kinds of shows, which are equal parts pageantry and commentary on just what America is doing in its collective kitchen.

Manowitz's series could have just as easily been called "What do vegans eat, anyway?" This is the question that Manowitz set out trying to answer. It is the question that every vegan is forever getting from every omnivore who seems to believe there is a parallel dimension of secret vegan foods.

But Manowitz, 30, who stopped eating meat in college at the suggestion of a girlfriend, never thought in terms of individual foods. He thought about full menus: red beans and rice. Whole-wheat pasta with vegetables. Stir-fries and curries of varying levels of heat. He is, lest his YouTube subscribers doubt his prowess, a really good cook.

1 Catch the Fever

Dengue Fever is, if you dissect it, a combination of a startling number of genres — groove, psych rock, traditional Asian pop, the list goes on. The L.A.-based group sings in English and Khmer, so if you don't understand the lyrics, blame it on that. It just dropped a new album, "Cannibal Courtship," from which you can hear songs at the group's concert tonight. Black Cat, 1811 14th St. NW; 8 p.m., $15-$17; 202-667-7960, Blackcatdc.com. The adventure novel isn't dead, everyone! "State of Wonder" is the latest novel by Ann Patchett, left, whose previous novels have included treks through the jungle. The New Way to Play

A touchscreen device controls Nintendo's latest console, Wii U

Video Games

Nintendo has introduced the world to the Wii's touchy new big brother: the Wii U.

The Japanese gaming giant on Tuesday unveiled the Wii video game console successor, which will broadcast high-definition video and feature a touchscreen controller that can detect motion and interact with what's occurring on a television display.

"Up until now, home console games had to occupy the TV screen in order to be played," said Nintendo president Satoru Iwata. "The new controller for Wii U, with its 6.2-inch screen built in, means you won't need to give up your gameplay when someone else comes in the room and wants to watch a TV program."

The white touchscreen controller can broadcast standard-definition video and features a directional pad, microphone, dual analog sticks, speakers, two pairs of shoulder buttons and a front-facing camera.

The prototype controller was demonstrated during the Electronic Entertainment Expo, the gaming industry's annual convention, in several ways: displaying a player's inventory in a "Legend of Zelda" game, being used as a shield from incoming attacks and offering an alternative way to play a chasing game.

The Wii U will be released between April and December next year, and will work with Wii games and controllers. The price was not announced. DERRIK J. LANG (AP)

Sunny Pop With A Bit of Mystery

Album Review

An elusive boy-girl duo from Brooklyn, Cults are the latest graduates of the Best Coast school of home-made, occasionally discordant girl-group throwback pop.

Brian Oblivion and Madeline Follin's self-titled major-label debut is bedraggled and beautiful; sinister and sad; and heavy and slight, and Cults work these juxtapositions for all they're worth. Cults want you to wonder about them, about the mystery that lies beneath their wispy, deceptively sunny songs. They rely, perhaps too heavily, on endless layers of reverb, on looped, disembodied vocals girded by what sound like innocent choruses of schoolkids.

It's this vague air of creepiness that saves Cults, who would otherwise be Sleigh Bells without the sound effects. As if to underscore their point, they've interspersed their Up With People-style pop songs with sound bites from cult leaders such as Jim Jones, who jump-starts the peerlessly pleasurable "Go Outside," one of many tracks that sound happier than they actually are. ALLISON STEWART (THE WASHINGTON POST)

The tweaked "Spider-Man: Turn off the Dark" leaves T.V. Carpio with a smaller role.

Ups and Downs On Broadway

For 'Spider-Man' star T.V. Carpio, change is her lone constant

Stage

T.V. Carpio must have either the best luck in the world or the worst.

Consider all that she's endured these past months: She lands a small role in Broadway's most expensive musical; sings with U2's Bono; gets promoted to a starring part; performs on David Letterman's show; gets whiplash; discovers that she has a thyroid disorder; turns 30; watches her patron get fired and has her role cut down.

The one constant for the star of "Spider-Man: Turn off the Dark" seems to be change.

"You couldn't make it up. It's like a dream. A surreal dream. And I'm living it," she says.

Carpio has managed to keep perspective amid the behind-the-scenes turmoil that saw original director Julie Taymor dismissed and Car-pio's part of Arachne cut down from an epic villain with five songs to a guardian angel with just three.

"Like any relationship, there's been a lot of ups and downs. I'm not going to lie and say there haven't been gloomy times. Of course, it's traumatizing when Mom and Dad get divorced," she says.

The stunt-heavy, $70 million show, with music by Bono and the Edge, began previews on Nov. 28 after years of delay but never officially opened, instead lurching from one embarrassment to another.

Playwright Roberto Aguirre-Saca-sa and director Philip William McKinley have since cleaned up the story, and the songs have been reworked.
It finally is to open June 14.

"Everybody's worked very hard.
Everybody's put blood, sweat and tears in this. That includes tears of joy and tears of sadness," Carpio says.

MARK KENNEDY (AP)

Roots Symphony Orchestra

For the follow-up to the Roots' 2010 album
"How I Got Over," drummer Questlove, pictured, says the veteran hip-hop band is planning a
"concept album" with orchestral arrangements.
"It's going to be heavy on orchestral chamber music with harder beats in it," he says, adding that the band may release it this year, but a 2012 street date is more likely. (BILLBOARD.COM)

The annual music fest Cayamo pairs singers and cruise passengers

Miami

Cayamo concerts are different in several ways. They start on time. They last only an hour. And the speakers hanging from the ceiling tend to sway. Sometimes the musicians do, too.

"Usually, I go where I want onstage," John Prine said. "But here I go where the ship takes me."

Cayamo is an annual music festival at sea featuring performers of Prine's ilk — singer-songwriters with acoustic guitars and devoted fans. There are bands, too, and amplifiers, and all of the attractions that go with any other Caribbean trip. That means sunshine, shore excursions, a laid-back vibe and too much food.

Mostly the 2,000 passengers come for music. That was the case when my wife and I took our first cruise in February to enjoy Cayamo aboard the Norwegian Pearl.

It was a seven-day excursion — six days of concerts and one day listening to musicians tune. Or so it seemed. Not to quibble: The music was great. Main attractions included Prine, Brandi Carlile, the Indigo Girls, Steve Earle, Patty Griffin, Richard Thompson, Loudon Wainwright III and Buddy Miller. But one of the delights was dis-

Brandi Carlile, left, and Shawn Mullins perform aboard the Norwegian Dawn in 2010.

Don't Rock the Boat

If you want to learn more about the seven-day cruise from Miami on the Norwegian Pearl to the Caribbean Feb. 5-12, visit Cayamo.com. All cabins have been booked, but a waiting list is available. Prices start at $1,235 per person for double occupancy interior cabins, so Jazz Fest or Bonnaroo would indeed be cheaper. But Cayamo has comfy chairs and no portable toilets, and you're always within walking distance of the swimming pool, a dining room and your bed. Other niche and genre music cruises are listed under "Events" at Sixthman.net. (AP) covering lesser-known acts such as Scott Miller; Chuck Cannon; and Roddie Romero and the Hub City All-Stars.

A partial lineup for February

2012 includes Prine, Thompson, Wainwright, Lyle Lovett, John Hiatt and Keb' Mo'.

Acts perform in half a dozen cozy venues, the largest seating about 800 people. On our trip, shows began in the afternoon, and music continued into the wee hours each night. One jam session in the atrium lasted until 2 a.m. and involved more than a dozen musicians from five bands.

For the many music geeks on board, it was like being a spectator at a golf or tennis tournament. You'd study the schedule at the beginning of day and plan where you wanted to be when, who you were willing to miss and who you absolutely had to see.

"It's an experience that can't be replicated on land," said Carolyn Spencer Brown, editor of Cruise-Critic.com. STEVEN WINE (AP)

- 2 cups dried fruit

Makes Five Cups

Preheat the oven to 300 F. In a large bowl, combine the oats, coconut, nuts, cinnamon and salt. In a small bowl, stir together the oil and honey.

Pour mixture over the dry ingredients and toss, making sure all the dry ingredients are coated by the liquids. Spread mixture on a prepared baking sheet and bake for 25 to 30 minutes, or until golden brown, stirring occasionally so the mixture browns evenly.

Place on rack to cool. Once cool, add dried fruit. Store in an airtight container. IAN BENS, THE FAIRMONT spring of 2009. The first year, the pair harvested 40 pounds of honey, which they use in drinks and dishes such as granola (see sidebar), iced tea and the Beetini, a buzzy twist on the martini. "We keep things very simple," Weber says. "That way, the honey shines."

Though the two chefs originally started honey farming to fuel their culinary projects, their hobby made them appreciate Washington in a new way. "I never stopped and looked at bees before," Bens says. "Now I notice them everywhere, and I wonder if they're ours."

Urban Farming

D.C.'s high pollen counts may make allergy sufferers sneeze and groan. But they're a boon for bees, which use the golden powder to produce honey. And if you have enough outdoor space to grow flowers, you might be able to keep your own hive.

Eating honey gathered from the backyard sounds sweet. But caring for a swarm of stingers seems dangerous. "It's easier than it seems," says Toni Burnham, a veteran apiarist with two hives on Capitol Hill. To get buzzing, she recommends taking a class. "Beekeeping isn't something you can learn from a book," she says. "You're developing a relationship with a very different creature." Find local intro courses via the Montgomery County Beekeepers Association of Maryland (Montgomerycountybeekeepers.com) and the Beekeepers Association of Northern Virginia (Beekeepersnova.org).

Many first-timers often spend a season working with a seasoned mentor. "To be a successful beekeeper takes a lot of living with them, observing them and working next to someone who can teach you about what your eyes are seeing and your nose is smelling," says Burnham. Hive masters can also turn to online forums such as Beesource (Beesource.com) for advice.

Even though you'll be as busy as a you-know-what putting your hive in during the spring, the work pays

Buzzy Bylaws

IN D.C.: It's legal to have a hive on federally controlled land like parks, but things get murky when it comes to housing bees on residential properties. Conflicting municipal codes leave beekeepers in a judicial gray area. For info, contact the Department of Parks and Recreation (Dpr.dc.gov/DC/DPR), which trains volunteers to maintain hives in community gardens.

IN MD./VA.: Beekeeping is legal in Maryland, but owners must register colonies within 30 days and update registration annually (download a form at Mda.state.md.us/plants-pests/plant_protection_weed_mgmt/apiary_inspection/index.php). Virginia also allows beekeeping, but its laws are more nuanced (read them at Vdacs.virginia.gov/plant&pest/apiary.shtml).

off when the liquid gold is harvested in mid- to late summer. "Washington honey is über-cool," Burnham says. "Like wine, it's a picture of a place where it was produced."

D.C. bees have access to a variety of flora, including tulip trees, backyard herbs and the exotic plantings at the U.S. National Arboretum. This mix brings a richly floral flavor to homegrown honey.

This sweet taste inspired the Fairmont Hotel's (2401 M St. NW) executive sous chef, Ian Bens, and executive pastry chef, Aron Weber, to start keeping bees on the hotel roof in the

Horoscope

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) A friend who has been out of the picture will resurface, and you'll both have a chance to figure out what happened between you.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You may feel as though there is something missing now that wasn't back in the day. Don't let this feeling sour your outlook.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You may be getting a great many warnings about a certain behavior and where it can lead, but you're on the right track.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You can take an old familiar something and turn it into a novelty that enjoys a whole new life of its own. Creativity is on the rise.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) You'll want to pick up the pace and let things transpire more quickly across the board. Impatience, however, is not a safe motivator.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) You may find yourself traveling throughout the day, and even though you are not necessarily far from home, you may well be homesick.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) You may be trying too hard to get things done exactly according to the regulations, but soon you'll realize a certain flexibility is in order.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You will be used to much that happens, having been in the same or a similar situation before. Some things take you by surprise.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) Maintain steady focus, even while those around you are losing control to a certain degree. Your positive outlook carries the day.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) See whether you can't add a little more daring into what is otherwise a rather routine endeavor. You can maximize your rewards, too.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You may have trouble making a strong and confident start, but later on when you reach your stride, progress can be swift.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Put your best foot forward, and remember that people who are watching can really do you a big favor when the time comes.
